vision  To be a champion for children by bringing world-class healthcare to every child under our watchful care, guided by the principles of the healing ministry of Christ.

mission  Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital continues the healing ministry of Christ, focusing on the physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual needs of children and their families. Through valued professionals, staff, community partners, and friends, we seek to enhance the lives of our community’s children by delivering on the promise of a healthier future today.

values  We are grounded in our vision every day by remaining true to our core values:
- Ministry
- Compassion
- Excellence
- Innovation
- Stewardship
Dear Friend of Children,

Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital is a place of miracles. Each of the children who come to us for care is full of promise. It is our privilege to be partners in healing, helping them to grow into the miracle they are to their family, community, and God.

In this report, you will read the story of one such miracle—twin miracles, actually. Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital began planning to care for Cristina and Crystal Molina long before they were even born. Just three months into her pregnancy, their mother, Blanca Cabrera, learned that her twins were craniopagus—joined at the head. From that time until the girls were eight months old, a team of physicians and staff developed plans for separation. Their meticulous care and commitment to the best future for the two little girls culminated in successful separation surgery on March 3, 2005. Today the girls are growing up here in Southern California, beautiful, happy, and healthy.

As the population of this region expands more rapidly than almost anywhere else in the country, so does our service to its children. In 2005, we cared for 12,653 children, five percent more than in the previous year. Outpatient visits rose to 105,483, a 12 percent increase over 2004. We also cared for children from around the world, including a 12-year-old boy from Afghanistan who no doubt would have died without heart surgery provided free of charge at Loma Linda. His life was saved because of the compassion of American troops serving in his homeland who saw the need and found a way to meet it.

The commitment of our staff at Children’s Hospital is matched by the generosity and caring of our donors and friends. Cash contributions from individuals were higher last year than at any time since Children’s Hospital opened in 1993. In addition, support from our corporate “Champions,” those who host fundraising events to benefit Children’s Hospital, exceeded $1 million for the first time in our history. This support made it possible for us to care for low-income, uninsured, and vulnerable children. Generous contributions also ensured that children under our care received treatment from world-class specialists using state-of-the-art equipment in an environment designed for the comfort of children.

While cash contributions provide for the needs of children today, endowments help ensure healthcare for future generations of children. Through an act of generosity and compassion in the 1960s, the late Congressman Jerry L. Pettis and his wife, Congresswoman Shirley N. Pettis, established named endowments to support pediatric cancer research and clinic care. In 2005, we were honored to recognize their gift by rededicating the pediatric hematology/oncology and stem cell transplant wing in honor of the Pettis family.

As we seek to care for an ever-larger population of children living in Southern California, we value your partnership and commitment. We trust that this report will provide you with a glimpse of the ways your support is helping children and ensuring that the miracles that happen here will continue as long as there are children who need them.

Sincerely,

Barbara Robinson, Chair
Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital Foundation Board

The miracle began at 7:30 on a Thursday morning. The two tiny girls were tucked into bed—specially made for them and donated by Kinetic Concepts, Inc. (KCI)—and put into a deep sleep by the team of anesthesiologists. The babies’ small skulls were bolted into place so there would be no movement whatsoever, not even a flinch, as the surgical team began its work. Renatta Osterdock, MD, a pediatric neurosurgeon at Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital and team leader on the case, had been preparing for this moment since long before the babies were born. When she and the team were finished, the twins would be separate individuals for the very first time.

What was to become known as the “Journey of Hope” began with a routine ultrasound three months into Blanca Cabrera’s pregnancy. Yes, she was carrying twins. But they were joined at the head, a condition known as craniopagus twins. Only 35 such cases have been reported since 1928.

Dr. Osterdock vividly remembers the phone call from the obstetrician: “Can you come talk to the mom and tell her what’s going to happen?” Dr. Osterdock paused. In six years of residency, a year of fellowship, and then years of clinical practice, she had never even seen conjoined twins. But she knew from professional meetings that advances in CT scans and magnetic resonance imaging were making separations more successful. She agreed to take the case and immediately began to research procedures, six months before the babies were due to arrive in the world.

“I started looking at what other people had done. What kind of technology did they use? What kind of studies needed to be done on the babies?” she recalls. A fetal MRI was reassuring. Though the twins’ heads were joined, they did not appear to share brain tissue or blood vessels. That could change, though, as they grew. “Over time they would become more and more connected,” she explains. Separating them as early as possible would be an important key to success.
On July 16, 2004, Cristina and Crystal were born by C-section at Loma Linda, two months premature but with no complications. They were two beautiful, lively little girls whose skulls were fused. They could see the world, but not each other.

Six months later the twins returned to Loma Linda to prepare for separate lives. Three-dimensional models created from CT scans and MRIs, provided free of charge by Medical Modeling in Colorado, allowed the surgical team to visualize exactly what they would encounter in the separation. The scans also confirmed the need for separation to take place as soon as possible. “By the third set of images, we saw that the facial artery of one twin was beginning to drain into the facial vein of her sister,” says Dr. Osterdock. “Doing surgery younger was probably safer.”

“They were two beautiful, lively little girls whose skulls were fused. They could see the world, but not each other.”

Jeannie Martinez, a long-time case manager in pediatric intensive care at Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital, was planning to retire in a few weeks when she got a call from Janel Isaeff, executive director for patient care, that put her plans on hold. “There’s going to be a special project,” Isaeff said, “and I’d like you to head it.” She talked with Martinez about the twins and arranged for her to meet with Dr. Osterdock and with the hospital’s Media Relations staff. “OK, Jeannie, you’re it,” said Isaeff a few days later. “Go ahead and form your team.” It would take 40 or more nurses, plus occupational, physical, and speech therapists, child life specialists, and a chaplain to see the girls through to their brand new life. Martinez put retirement on hold.

The twins were scheduled to check into the hospital on January 2, 2005, to begin two months of preparation for surgery. A key part of preparation would be tissue expansion. “There was another set of twins joined at the head that were separated very successfully in Italy,” Dr. Osterdock says. “Neurologically, they did great. But they had skin grafts where their skulls were separated, so they ended up without hair, which is a pretty significant deformity. We wanted to use the twins’ own skin to cover the separation spot so they could have normal hair."

There was just one major difficulty. Unlike adults, infants have soft skulls. “People are often very afraid to put tissue expanders in babies,” Dr. Osterdock notes. “You can imagine that if you blow up a balloon under a baby’s skin, it’s not just going to push the skin out—it’ll push the skull in. So we capitalized on the place where their skulls were fused to stretch the skin, because the part where they were attached had relatively thick and firm bone.”

The need for tissue expansion was just one challenge to the nursing staff. Every other day a syringe would be inserted into the twins’ scalps and saline added to the expanders. Each injection was another opportunity for infection to set in.

Another challenge was finding the right kind of bed so there would not be too much pressure on any one part of their bodies. The answer was a specialty bed developed by KCI with a floatation mattress. Martinez arranged in-service training so the nurses could learn how to use it.

As the girls grew ready for surgery, the medical team continued to resolve technical dilemmas. One of the most vexing was how to secure the girls’ heads during the separation. “The way we typically fixate a head during surgery so that it doesn’t move is by putting pins with 60 pounds of pressure into the skull,” says Dr. Osterdock. “But you put an infant’s skull under 60 pounds of pressure and you just crush it. We had to come up with another way.”

“But you put an infant’s skull under 60 pounds of pressure and you just crush it. We had to come up with another way.”
The solution came to the surgical team one evening during a planning session over Thai food. What if they implanted small washers into the babies’ skulls several weeks before surgery? Bolts could then be threaded into the washers at the beginning of the separation surgery, and the bolts fastened to clamps. Dr. Osterdock drew the concept in colored pencil and sent it to an engineer at Mayfield Corporation. Could he fabricate such a system? “Yeah!” he replied. Each of the pieces he made was imprinted with one of the twins’ names on it, because it was specifically designed just for her. “We were able to fixate an infant’s skull without any pressure,” says Dr. Osterdock. “It’s never been done before, that we know of.”

Up on the acute care pediatric unit, the staff was keeping the twins’ presence a secret, to ensure privacy. They did such a good job of it that one day when the girls’ nurse went to lunch, charge nurse Alane Allbee asked another regular staff nurse to watch the twins. “What twins?” came the mystified reply.

Those who did know about the unit’s special charges were falling in love with them. “Oh my goodness, they were precious,” Allbee gushes. “They were so good, and so much fun to work with.”

Dr. Osterdock and several therapists were known to stop by after work just to play with the girls. And, Allbee notes, the caregivers were so meticulous that in nearly three months in the hospital, the twins did not have a single complication or infection.

Somewhere along the line the pediatric staff decided that the girls’ “Journey of Hope” needed to be documented so they and their parents could know how much love had enveloped them at Loma Linda. With the help of a digital camera and 20 or more enthusiastic scrapbookers, they created five books of pictures and stories, two for each girl and one for their parents.

Sunday, February 27, 2005—just four days remained before surgery. Dr. Osterdock promised that if the team involved in the surgery would come to a dress rehearsal, she’d cook lunch for them—all 40 of them. They came even though it was their day off and no one was paid for it. They practiced every step, from fitting the girls into the special beds that would rotate as the incision was made, to draping the tables, setting up the central lines, and carrying out each step of the operation. It took most of the day, but “it was awesome,” Dr. Osterdock remembers. “Everybody was just so excited. I was nervous, but I couldn’t believe how much people went out of their way to make this happen.”

Dr. Osterdock tells her residents that “being a surgeon is not a right. You don’t just get to go into everybody’s head. You have to earn that privilege. It is an awesome responsibility.” On Thursday, March 3, 2005, she and the surgical team were entrusted with responsibility for the lives and futures of two little girls. At 6:30 a.m., they set to work.

The anesthesiologists went first, Drs. Linda Mason, Carol Lau, Elizabeth Ghazal, and Brenna Gustafson putting the girls into deep sleep. Plastic surgeons Andrea Ray and Brett Lehocky played the next role in the ongoing drama, making careful incisions to open the skin. Finally neurosurgeons Osterdock and Alexander Zouros began to cut through the bone.

The neurosurgeons expected their part of the surgery to take six to eight hours. It took only two. “There was a period of about 10 minutes when we couldn’t see anything,” Dr. Osterdock recalls. “We started to separate the bones and then to get in between the two babies. We were feeling, feeling, feeling, and all of a sudden the instrument went all the way through. I said, ‘I think I just went through.’

“We both looked at each other,” she continues, “and I said, ‘I think we need to separate the beds.’ Everybody looked at us like, ‘You’re kidding.’ I’m like, ‘No, I think we’re separated.’ Nobody would believe us!”

Despite surgeons’ best efforts to understand their patients’ condition before surgery, not everything can be known in advance. In one twin separation done in New York, the presurgical MRIs appeared to show no brain connection, but when the surgeons got into the operating room, they found that the brains were indeed connected. Fortunately, that was not the case with Cristina and Crystal. Only the dura, the lining of the brain under the skull, was connected, says Dr. Osterdock, who describes it as being “like filo dough. It has multiple layers. What we did was separate the leaves so they both had intact dura. We never went into the brain at all.” The skin expanders worked; the plastic surgeons had plenty of skin to cover the separation sites. The girls could look forward to a normal future.

Two days later the twins, now in separate beds for the first time, were out of intensive care and back on the pediatric acute care unit. In just three weeks they were able to go home in their parents’ brand new van. And eleven months later they attended the Children’s Hospital gala with their parents—two perfectly beautiful, identical, and now completely separate little girls, continuing in their Journey of Hope.

“For these two little girls and their parents, Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital was indeed a place of miracles.”

Looking back, Dr. Osterdock admits that “sometimes you feel like you’re biting off more than you can chew.” Previous teams that separated conjoined twins were, she says, made up of “the people we think of as world experts.” The team she led was young and primarily composed of women. “One of the biggest challenges is letting people know what we’re capable of here, how awesome the Loma Linda team is,” she says. “We have all the latest technology and practice state-of-the-art neurosurgery.”

Philanthropic support of Children’s Hospital makes miracles like the separation of the conjoined twins possible, she believes. Proceeds from the 2006 Children’s Hospital gala held February 26 will support the work of the pediatric neurosciences team.

For these two little girls and their parents, Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital was indeed a place of miracles. Alane Allbee saw it in the care of the nurses who “put their heart and soul out there and gave 100 percent” in their care for the twins. Jeannie Martinez saw the miracle in “the smile on Mom and Dad’s faces when Dr. Osterdock came in to tell them that they had two little girls that were separated and they were just fine.”

And for Cristina and Crystal, the miracle just may have been when they saw each other, face to face, for the very first time. For them, and for the other children Loma Linda serves, the miracles continue every day.
Endowments ensure that healing care offered by Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital will be available to future generations of children. In addition, named endowments provide a lasting tribute to an individual or a family’s legacy of philanthropy. For more information about establishing a named endowment, call the LLUCH Foundation at (909) 558-3560.

The A. Gary Anderson Family Foundation

Carrying out Mr. Anderson’s legacy to meet community needs, the A. Gary Anderson Family Foundation has generously funded the A. Gary Anderson Playroom at Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital. This playroom affords young patients the opportunity to interact with others and to enjoy diversionary play under the caring supervision of Child Life Specialists. Away from medical procedures, children can forget their illnesses for a while as they immerse themselves in arts, crafts, interactive media, and more. This endowment provides annual support for play-therapy programs within the A. Gary Anderson Playroom.

The Raoul and Martha Chacon Family Endowment

The Chacon family believes in the future of our children. Family members have chosen to honor this belief through an endowment that also serves as a legacy to the lifesaving and compassionate care provided by Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital to the children of this community. Embracing the commitment of Children’s Hospital to turn no child away, the Chacon Family endowment helps ensure that each child receives the special medical care he or she deserves.

The Ken Ramirez Family Endowment

The Ramirez family is dedicated to the eradication of childhood diabetes, a serious and fast-growing epidemic in the Inland Empire and the sixth-leading cause of death in the United States. The Ramirez family believes that each child should enjoy optimal health and supports the efforts of Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital to treat childhood diabetes and seek the ultimate cure. This endowment was founded by Ken Ramirez and is supported by members of the extended Ramirez family. Annual proceeds from the endowment support treatment and education provided to Inland Empire children by the pediatric diabetes center at Children’s Hospital.
The James and Rowena Ramos Family Endowment

In the late 1990s, James and Rowena Ramos were inspired to provide for community children through charitable gifts to Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital. Their inspiration grew from the care provided by Children’s Hospital for young members of their family, including granddaughter Summer Fawn, grandsons Tom Strongwind Ramos and Hawk Brown Ramos, and great-grandson Bryce Ekel. They were also guided by the example provided by Rowena’s parents, Raoul and Martha Chacon, who were already supporters of Children’s Hospital.

“Rowena has always been very protective of children and hates to see them suffering,” shares James. This endowment was established because of their wish to ensure world-class healthcare for future generations of Inland Empire children. With a growing family that currently includes five children, sixteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, James and Rowena also hope to establish a family legacy around community philanthropy that will continue for generations.

The James W. Totman Pediatric Cancer Research Endowment

A longtime resident of the Inland Empire, James W. Totman built a successful general contracting business building homes, apartment complexes, and commercial buildings. He became acquainted with Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital through friends and professional advisors. Inspired by his associates’ plans to support charitable organizations in the community with their own estates, Mr. Totman established a trust that would provide an endowment for ongoing pediatric cancer research at Children’s Hospital.

Jerry L. and Shirley N. Pettis Family Research and Operating Endowment

In 1968, Jerry L. and Shirley N. Pettis partnered with Loma Linda University and Medical Center through a charitable trust. During his distinguished tenure in the U.S. House of Representatives, Jerry’s life was lost in a plane accident. Shirley ran for his vacant congressional seat and served in the ninety-fourth and ninety-fifth Congress. After returning to California, Shirley helped to establish and served as the founding chair of the Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital Foundation.

The Pettis Family Endowments provide funds for pediatric hematolgy and oncology research and clinical care at Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital. In recognition of their generous contribution, the pediatric hematology/oncology and stem cell transplant wing of Children’s Hospital was named in honor of the Jerry L. and Shirley N. Pettis Family in 2005.
Every year, patients at Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital benefit from generous donations made by individuals, foundations, corporations, and support organizations. A few very special corporations and support organizations have committed to host an annual fundraising event benefiting Children’s Hospital with a gift of $5,000 or more.

Together, these Champions for children have helped to enhance special services and programs, fund new technology, and provide care for children whose families could not otherwise afford it.

On behalf of our patients, we thank you for your dedication.

shining star funds

Giving to Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital is a wonderful way to honor or remember someone special, while also bringing hope to a sick or injured child.

Along with an honor or memorial gift, tribute donors can establish a Shining Star Fund in the name of their loved one. As well as paying special tribute, a Shining Star Fund provides an everlasting way to honor or remember someone.

Anyone may contribute to a Shining Star Fund at any time or to acknowledge a loss, birthday, anniversary, or other special occasion. Gifts to Shining Star Funds are used for immediate needs throughout Children’s Hospital and help ensure critical healthcare services for the children.

Newly established funds are acknowledged in the Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital & Foundation Annual Report. When contributions to a Shining Star Fund reach $2,500 or more, a celestial star will be named for the honored individual. Shining Star Funds that have received contributions of $5,000 or more will be included on a Shining Star donor wall located in the Children’s Hospital.

For more information about how to honor a loved one with a Shining Star Fund, please contact the Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital Foundation at (909) 558-3911.

“In the midst of the devastation of losing our son, we found ourselves asking how would anyone know the amazing impact that such as small, precious baby could have on our lives and the lives of our family and friends. We found hope in using ‘earthly treasures’ to bless the lives of other children, thereby giving our son a legacy of blessing others as he had blessed us.”

Membership in the Heritage Society is extended to anyone who includes a gift to Loma Linda University, Loma Linda University Medical Center, or Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital as part of an estate plan. Through their generosity, members ensure the future of these institutions.

In recognition of their support, members receive a handsome certificate suitable for framing and may choose to have their name included on the Heritage Society Donor Wall prominently located in the lobby of Loma Linda University Medical Center. They are included in special celebrations and important occasions and receive regular updates from organizational leadership. In addition, members receive publications that provide updates regarding educational, clinical, research, and service activities on campus. Most importantly, members are an integral part of the University, Medical Center, and Children’s Hospital family and have the satisfaction of knowing that they are making a significant difference in advancing Loma Linda’s mission.

Members of the Heritage Society can be assured that information relating to their gifts and estate plans will be kept confidential. The only information made public will be the names of members who elect to be included on the Heritage Society donor wall. In no case will the financial details of gifts be disclosed.

To become a Heritage Society member or if you would like more information, please call the Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital Foundation at (909) 558-3560 or write to:

Loma Linda University Children’s Hospital Foundation is fortunate to have an association of volunteer guilds whose events and activities raise funds to help meet the healthcare needs of community children. In addition, guild members help to brighten the lives of hospitalized children through fun and diversionary activities.

Together, the Loma Linda Guild and Desert Guild include more than 400 members from throughout Southern California.

For more information about becoming a member of a guild or starting a guild in your own area, please contact the LLUCH Foundation office at (909) 558-3560.

To be a champion for children by bringing world-class healthcare to every child under our watchful care, guided by the principles of the healing ministry of Christ.

Loma Linda University Children's Hospital continues the healing ministry of Christ, focusing on the physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual needs of children and their families. Through valued professionals, staff, community partners, and friends, we seek to enhance the lives of our community's children by delivering on the promise of a healthier future today.

We are grounded in our vision everyday by remaining true to our core values: • Ministry • Compassion • Excellence • Innovation • Stewardship many strengths.

one mission.
